Introduction: Africa's security landscape: Localized global Threats

What characterizes today's global security landscape?

A convergence of various manifestations of the globalization order and the side effects of a multi-polar world of politics (Since 2008) - These effects are coupled with an ever evolving nature of security threats that have led to:

The blossoming of new radicalisms: Religious, ethnic, political & ideological and economic
The 3 Isms: Separatism, Nationalism, Terrorism

Contested space by emerging powers/groups vs. "initial owners" (in quest of a new order) Centre of attention of the power dynamics

Challenges deeply rooted into domestic and regional socio-political exacerbated by fragility factors, challenging environments

These threats have 4 characteristic features that impact Africa:

- Multiplicity
- Complexity
- Unpredictability
- Volatility

Policy shift to:

To the redefinition of the notion of security: Citizen dimension of Security & revived notion of collective security... Planning and foresights strategies become important elements to define national interests and responses to threats in a context of scared resources.

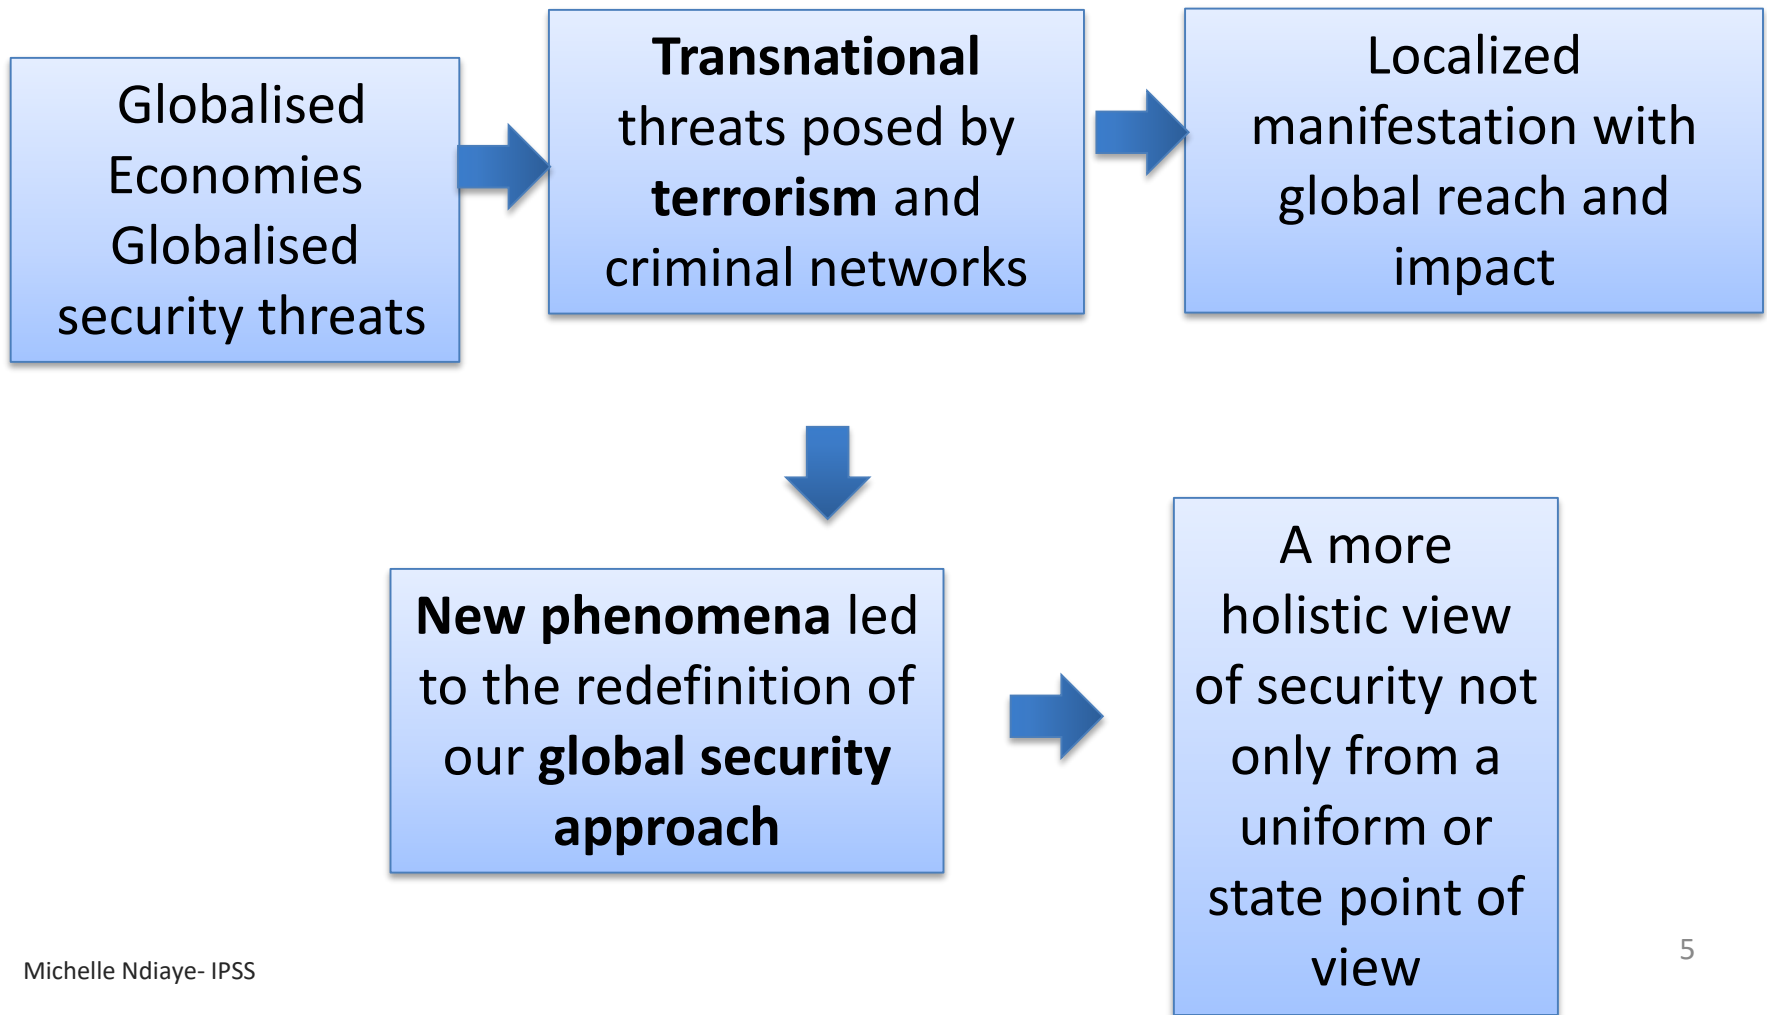

Introduction (Cont.)

Contemporary security challenges have reached a level of complexity never witnessed before. The imperative for NSSD cannot be dissociated from the analysis of this context.

There are 3 layers of threats that justify NSS development

Level 1: Globalisation of insecurities

Level 1: Globalisation of insecurities (cont.)

Environmental degradation and climate change

Massive migration and displacements

International
Terrorism

Demographic growth

Current 7.3 Billion, 8.5 in 2030,
9.7 in 2050) UN DESA 2015. ½
of the growth will come from Africa (2.2 Billion in 2050).

Organised
Crime

Economic disparities

To mention few but more importantly the 6 global threats by UN Development

Level 2: Securitization VS Human Security

Socio-economic phenomena are securitised!

Emerging

Health security

Energy security

Massive Migration and displacements

Cyber security

Water Security

Community conflicts

Persistent

Terrorism

Radicalization and religious extremism

Maritime security

The criminal economy

Organized crime

Resources Security

Governance & democratic deficit

Climate security & environmental degradation (Food Security)

Challenging our definition of on Human Security!

Cyclical

Conventional and non-conventional

Level 3: “The inward looking” threats

States more inward looking

- Blossoming new radicalisms, religious, political and ideological with unprecedented consequences on the nature of states relations.
- Communal conflicts – Subnational level dominates the conflict and security narratives.
- Pressing internal challenges- Importance of the Human security dimension.

The looming end of multilateralism

- Disengagement of the champions

Impact on mobilising UN funding for Peace and security in Africa

One common denominator: Interconnectedness!

A National Security Strategy in this context is more than an imperative; it is a game changer!

There are many factors that are challenging the development of National Security Strategy in Africa

Challenges for NSSD in Africa

Strategic documents & policies document are not developed or not in place in many member states

Political decision vs the understanding the narrative of threats

Harmonization of existing documents and sectoral policies

Lack of support to MS. to harmonize national, regional and continental security policies

Security Sector governance deficit

Limited capacities of AU and RECs to assist Member States in the development and implementation of national SSR policies and strategies

Shared narrative of the Human Security paradigm

Opportunities for NSSD in Africa

Existing frameworks in favor of NSS development in Africa

The African Union:

- The 2000 AU Constitutive Act

Security Sector Reform gaps- NSS leads inevitably to Security Sector Reform

Lessons learned from existing NSS
